

Catherine Raaflaub, Ph.D.

Senior Consultant

Catherine Raaflaub Ph.D., is an independent and international school leader who has served in K-12 schools from her home in Canada to the US, Australia and the Middle East. She has held a wide range of teaching, administrative and residential positions, including successful headships where she built positive relationships and strong community partnerships. She is a curriculum developer, a community builder, an idea generator and strategic thinker, with a keen grasp on program development for faculty, students and parents. She holds a CFRE and is recognized for her ability to inspire and lead sustainable strategic change in diverse academic, organizational and community settings.

Dr Raaflaub has led internal accreditations with Canadian Educational Standards Institute CESI (now CAIS). The international Baccalaureate Organization (IBO), Middle States Association (MSA) and Independent School Association of the Central States (ISACS) as well as served as a visiting team member.

Catherine was educated in Ontario and completed her undergraduate degree in Science at the University of Waterloo, her Master's in Education at Niagara University, USA and her PhD in Australia at Curtin University's Science and Math Education center. She holds a CFRE and was named a Klingenstein Fellow at Columbia University in 2010.

Dr Raaflaub and her husband Brian have three daughters, all of whom are pursuing careers in international education. They make their home wherever they are together and on a lake in northern Ontario.

Dr. Raaflaub may be reached via e-mail at catherine@ta-stl.com.