

David A. Ottaviano, Ed.D.

Senior Consultant

Dr. David Ottaviano is a Senior Consultant for Triangle Associates, an international consultancy specializing in public, independent and international education. David has extensive experience in school administration. His tenure as a school head includes 10 years as a public school superintendent in New Jersey and 19 years as head of private, international schools in Serbia, Italy, Japan and Romania. With his years at the helm of schools, he has gained expertise in strategic planning, international recruitment, board training, and operations management; he brings strong experience and an analytical perspective to the table to help schools in their quest for improvement. A psychologist by training, Dr. Ottaviano uses current psychological theory to inform his leadership approach.

In addition to 29 years experience as a school head, Dr. Ottaviano has experience as a former Board of Education Member in Bernards Township, New Jersey, so he understands the issues from all sides. He is certified as an MBTI evaluator and has held board leadership positions in the international professional development groups in Asia (EARCOS) and Central and Eastern Europe (CEESA). David's specialty is in budgetary analysis, human resource management, head/senior leadership searches, strategic planning and program evaluation.

Dr. Ottaviano's undergraduate degree is from Grove City College. He completed his Masters in School Psychology at Montclair State University, and his Ed.D. in Educational Leadership at Fairleigh Dickinson University. He was a Klingenstein Fellow at Teachers College, Columbia University. He lives in Europe with his wife Cathy. Their son works in Ulaanbaatar, Mongolia as a school counselor and their daughter currently lives in NYC, was a Fulbright Scholar in Macedonia and currently attends a post baccalaureate program at Columbia University.
